ABSTRACT

The course is designed for students, grades 10 to 12, with vocational aspirations in the field of interior design or in related fields. An individualized approach is used, and behavioral objectives are specified. The course outline cites independent study guidelines, career projects, design projects, decorating projects, construction and do-it-yourself projects, research and problem solving projects, and evaluation as the main areas of concern. The body of the document is divided into three vertical columns presenting suggested content ideas, learning opportunities, and resources. A four-page bibliography and examples of evaluation and project forms are included. (AG)

COURSE DESCRIPTION

This course is designed for the student with vocational aspirations in the field of interior design or in related fields. It gives the student an opportunity to apply previous learnings in this area and the related arts when designing special interest projects. This course may be offered as a regular class, to one or more students within another class, or to a student or students on an independent study basis meeting with the teacher during her conference period.

ENROLLMENT GUIDELINES

It is recommended that this course be made available on a selective basis to students in grades 10-12 who possess qualities necessary for successful independent study and who have met the objectives of at least one quinmester course in interior design or architectural drafting. Previous art training will also prove helpful.

RATIONALE

This individualized approach to the study of interior design and housing provides the student with opportunities to use his own judgment, to learn at a rate best suited to him and to be responsible for some of his own educational decisions. This is not an introductory course. The student will rely on previous learnings and personal interest to select, with teacher guidance, learning experiences which will aid him in the decision-making and skill development needed for his future homemaking and career endeavors. The student's independent studies will extend his classroom into the entire school and community. He will become his own teacher in many respects and will benefit from association with persons employed in this and related fields.

FOREWORD

This course of study has been developed by teachers as part of an effort to make Home and Family Education more meaningful and interesting to students. It is not intended to be a prescription for teaching, but rather an aid to the teacher in meeting the objectives. The wealth of activities and resources are intended to be examples from which the teacher can select those that best meet the needs of the students. To facilitate continuity it is recommended that the teacher be selective in choosing activities, but maintain all objectives within the course. Where content ideas are given, they are intended to be general notes and suggestions from the writer(s) to the teacher to further explain objectives and activities. This first edition is a Working Copy and it is hoped that the teacher will note suggested changes and additions while using it in order to aid in future revision. This course of study was developed under the direction and leadership of Mrs. Martha Lee La Croix, Supervisor, Mrs. Betty Morrow and Mrs. Margaret Hein, Teacher-Coordinators, Home and Family Education.

MAJOR GOALS

1. The student will work independently to further develop understandings, attitudes and skills previously acquired in the area of housing and home furnishings.
2. The student will gain confidence in his own intellectual and creative abilities as he uses his ingenuity and imagination to design and create original projects related to interior design.
3. The student will demonstrate his analytic ability and evaluation skill through illustrations and written and oral presentations.
4. The student will analyze the characteristics of interior design as a profession.

BEHAVIORAL OUTCOMES*

The student will be able to:

1. Participate actively in the selection of objectives, activities and resources for his self-directed study and accept major responsibility for the results of his efforts.
2. Conduct a thorough investigation of at least one of the various careers related to housing and interior design.
3. Design or redesign an interior space and present his illustrations orally to his advisor or review panel.
4. Decorate an interior area and use professional techniques when illustrating and presenting his project.
5. Utilize artistic skills to manually create or decorate an object or space.
6. Research a specific problem related to interior design or housing and present his findings orally and in writing.

*The student may choose to meet all of the above objectives or he may select only three or four to be met. It is recommended that number one and at least two additional outcomes be required. The number of projects selected to meet these objectives will depend upon the student's ability, interest and the depth into which he carries the projects.

BEHAVIORAL OUTCOME: 1. Participate actively in the selection of objectives, activities and resources for his self-directed study and accept major responsibility for the results of his efforts.

SUGGESTED CONTENT IDEAS	LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES	RESOURCES
Independent study courses provide for an increase in student freedom accompanied by a corresponding increase in student responsibility. Advance and clear understanding as to teacher and student expectations for the course are essential to give direction and promote success.	Complete application for independent study. As a class or individually discuss with teacher-advisor the purposes and benefits of the independent study course. Make specific plans and decisions concerning the degree of self-direction to be exercised in this course of study. If more than one student is involved, will some decisions and work be group efforts? Sign individual student-teacher contract. Devise a system of recordkeeping. Student folders for storage of records, forms for course plans and progress reports would be helpful.	Sample application for independent study Appendix Sample course contract Appendix Sample form for course plans Appendix Using suggested list of behavioral outcomes and outline of possible projects explore possible objectives. Discuss personal goals and interests with teacher. Together determine objectives and tentative projects. (See note attached to list of behavioral outcomes.) Plan tentative time requirements for each objective. Determine work space and materials needed. (Work materials needed will vary and are listed with projects.)

BEHAVIORAL OUTCOME: 1. Participate actively in the selection of objectives, activities and resources for his self-directed study and to accept major responsibility for the results of his efforts.

SUGGESTED CONTENT IDEAS	LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES	RESOURCES
Independent study courses are based on the premise that the student does not need constant supervision for learning. Yet provisions must be made for the teacher-adviser to effectively guide and assist the student's progress. Brainstorm to compile a reference list of specific resources in the school and community. Make advance appointments for interviews, tours, etc. Make a tentative schedule for consultation and progress checks with the teacher. Plan methods and time for final evaluation. (It is suggested that the student confer with his teacher at least once a week.) Possible methods for final evaluation: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Present project to class. Members give constructive evaluation in the form of opinions and questions. Present project to a review panel consisting of such members as the art and drafting teachers, a community resource person and a student of Interior Design at a local college. Student and teacher should confer on final evaluation regardless of previous steps taken. 	Physical resources: AV materials Film Filmstrip Slide Books Reference Text Furniture displays Interior design studio Retail store Homes Model Private Magazines Home Teen Trade Newspapers Home section Trade Special showings Wholesale showroom Interior design spring show Student projects and contests Miami Dade Jr. College Lindsey Hopkins Educ. BEHAVIORAL OUTCOME: 2. Conduct a thorough investigation of at least one of the various careers related to housing and interior design.

SUGGESTED CONTENT IDEAS	LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES	RESOURCES
Note: The activities for this objective can be started early and continued throughout the course as the student is exposed to various jobs and people employed in the fields related to housing. A thorough understanding of one's intended career will enable him to make realistic judgments concerning job preparation. Check accuracy and seek the following additional information: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Read at least three references. Interview at least one person who holds a similar position. Interview persons in career advising positions such as school counselor, college adviser and professor. Survey students enrolled in special design courses or schools. Interview employers or personnel managers in establishments which employ persons for such positions. Refer to telephone directory for listings of private schools which offer training in the field. Secure brochures or interview personnel from the schools. Write one of the organizations for additional information (listed under resources). Clip related employment advertisements from classified ad section of newspapers. With research completed, update the original job description and add additional "facts of interest."	Each student describe the type of job related to housing in which he is most interested. Give impressions of the job, the training necessary, the opportunities for employment and the monetary and other rewards which result. Home Economists in Action Exciting Careers for Home Economics Home Economics as a Profession	American Institute of Interior Designers National Home Fashions League, Inc. APPENDIX

STUDENT APPLICATION FOR INDEPENDENT STUDY

The independent study student is, in many respects, his own teacher. Specifically, independent study offers to the student the freedom to choose his own topic, to delineate the scope of and determine the pace in his study, and to decide on the means and/or techniques by which he wants to reach his goals; but independent study also sets certain limitations: the student must show evidence that he has the basic ability, the background, and the incentive to pursue an independent study course; moreover, he must prove to his advisers that the program will be meaningful to him and his intellectual or artistic growth.

Personal characteristics of the student who should consider independent study: A number of research studies has been generated recently to ascertain personal qualities of students who have potential for engaging in independent study. In each case the following attributes seem to appear and are judged as good predictors for success in autonomous ventures.

Students considering enrollment in this program should possess some degree of most of the following:

- | | |
|--|----------------------------------|
| An inquiring mind | Resourcefulness |
| Powers of analysis | Curiosity |
| Self-discipline | The capacity to be self-starting |
| Persistence | and self-directing |
| Reflectiveness | Energy and stamina |
| Inclination toward divergent thinking | Self-confidence |

1. I assume full responsibility for ascertaining the date, time and place of all course sessions. Furthermore, I will be present at all lectures, work sessions, seminars and other appointments designated by the course instructor. In view of the unusual amount of unsupervised time associated with this course, I realize that cutting a class session, wasting time during contract hours, or being late to my quest space, is a serious breach of good faith and constitutes grounds for termination of this contract.
2. I agree to assume full responsibility for my conduct during the days on which no course sessions are scheduled and will report promptly to the agreed work space and remain during the required time furthering my academic education.

CLIENT:

Your clients have recently moved from a comfortable medium sized home in the suburbs of Cincinnati, Ohio to the town house described below. They are a family of three. Both parents are in their middle 40's and their only child is a 15 year old daughter.

The following information was gleaned from an interview with the group. They prefer separate living room and dining room facilities not provided in this town house. (Let this be a challenge to the designer.) In the kitchen they have requested some type of snack bar. All meals however will be served at the dining room table. Father feels this is the only way to teach manners to his child. Both parents are avid readers. They hoped to find a house large enough to have a separate library. (Let this be a challenge to the designer.) A space for reading and sitting has also been requested to be a part of their bedroom.

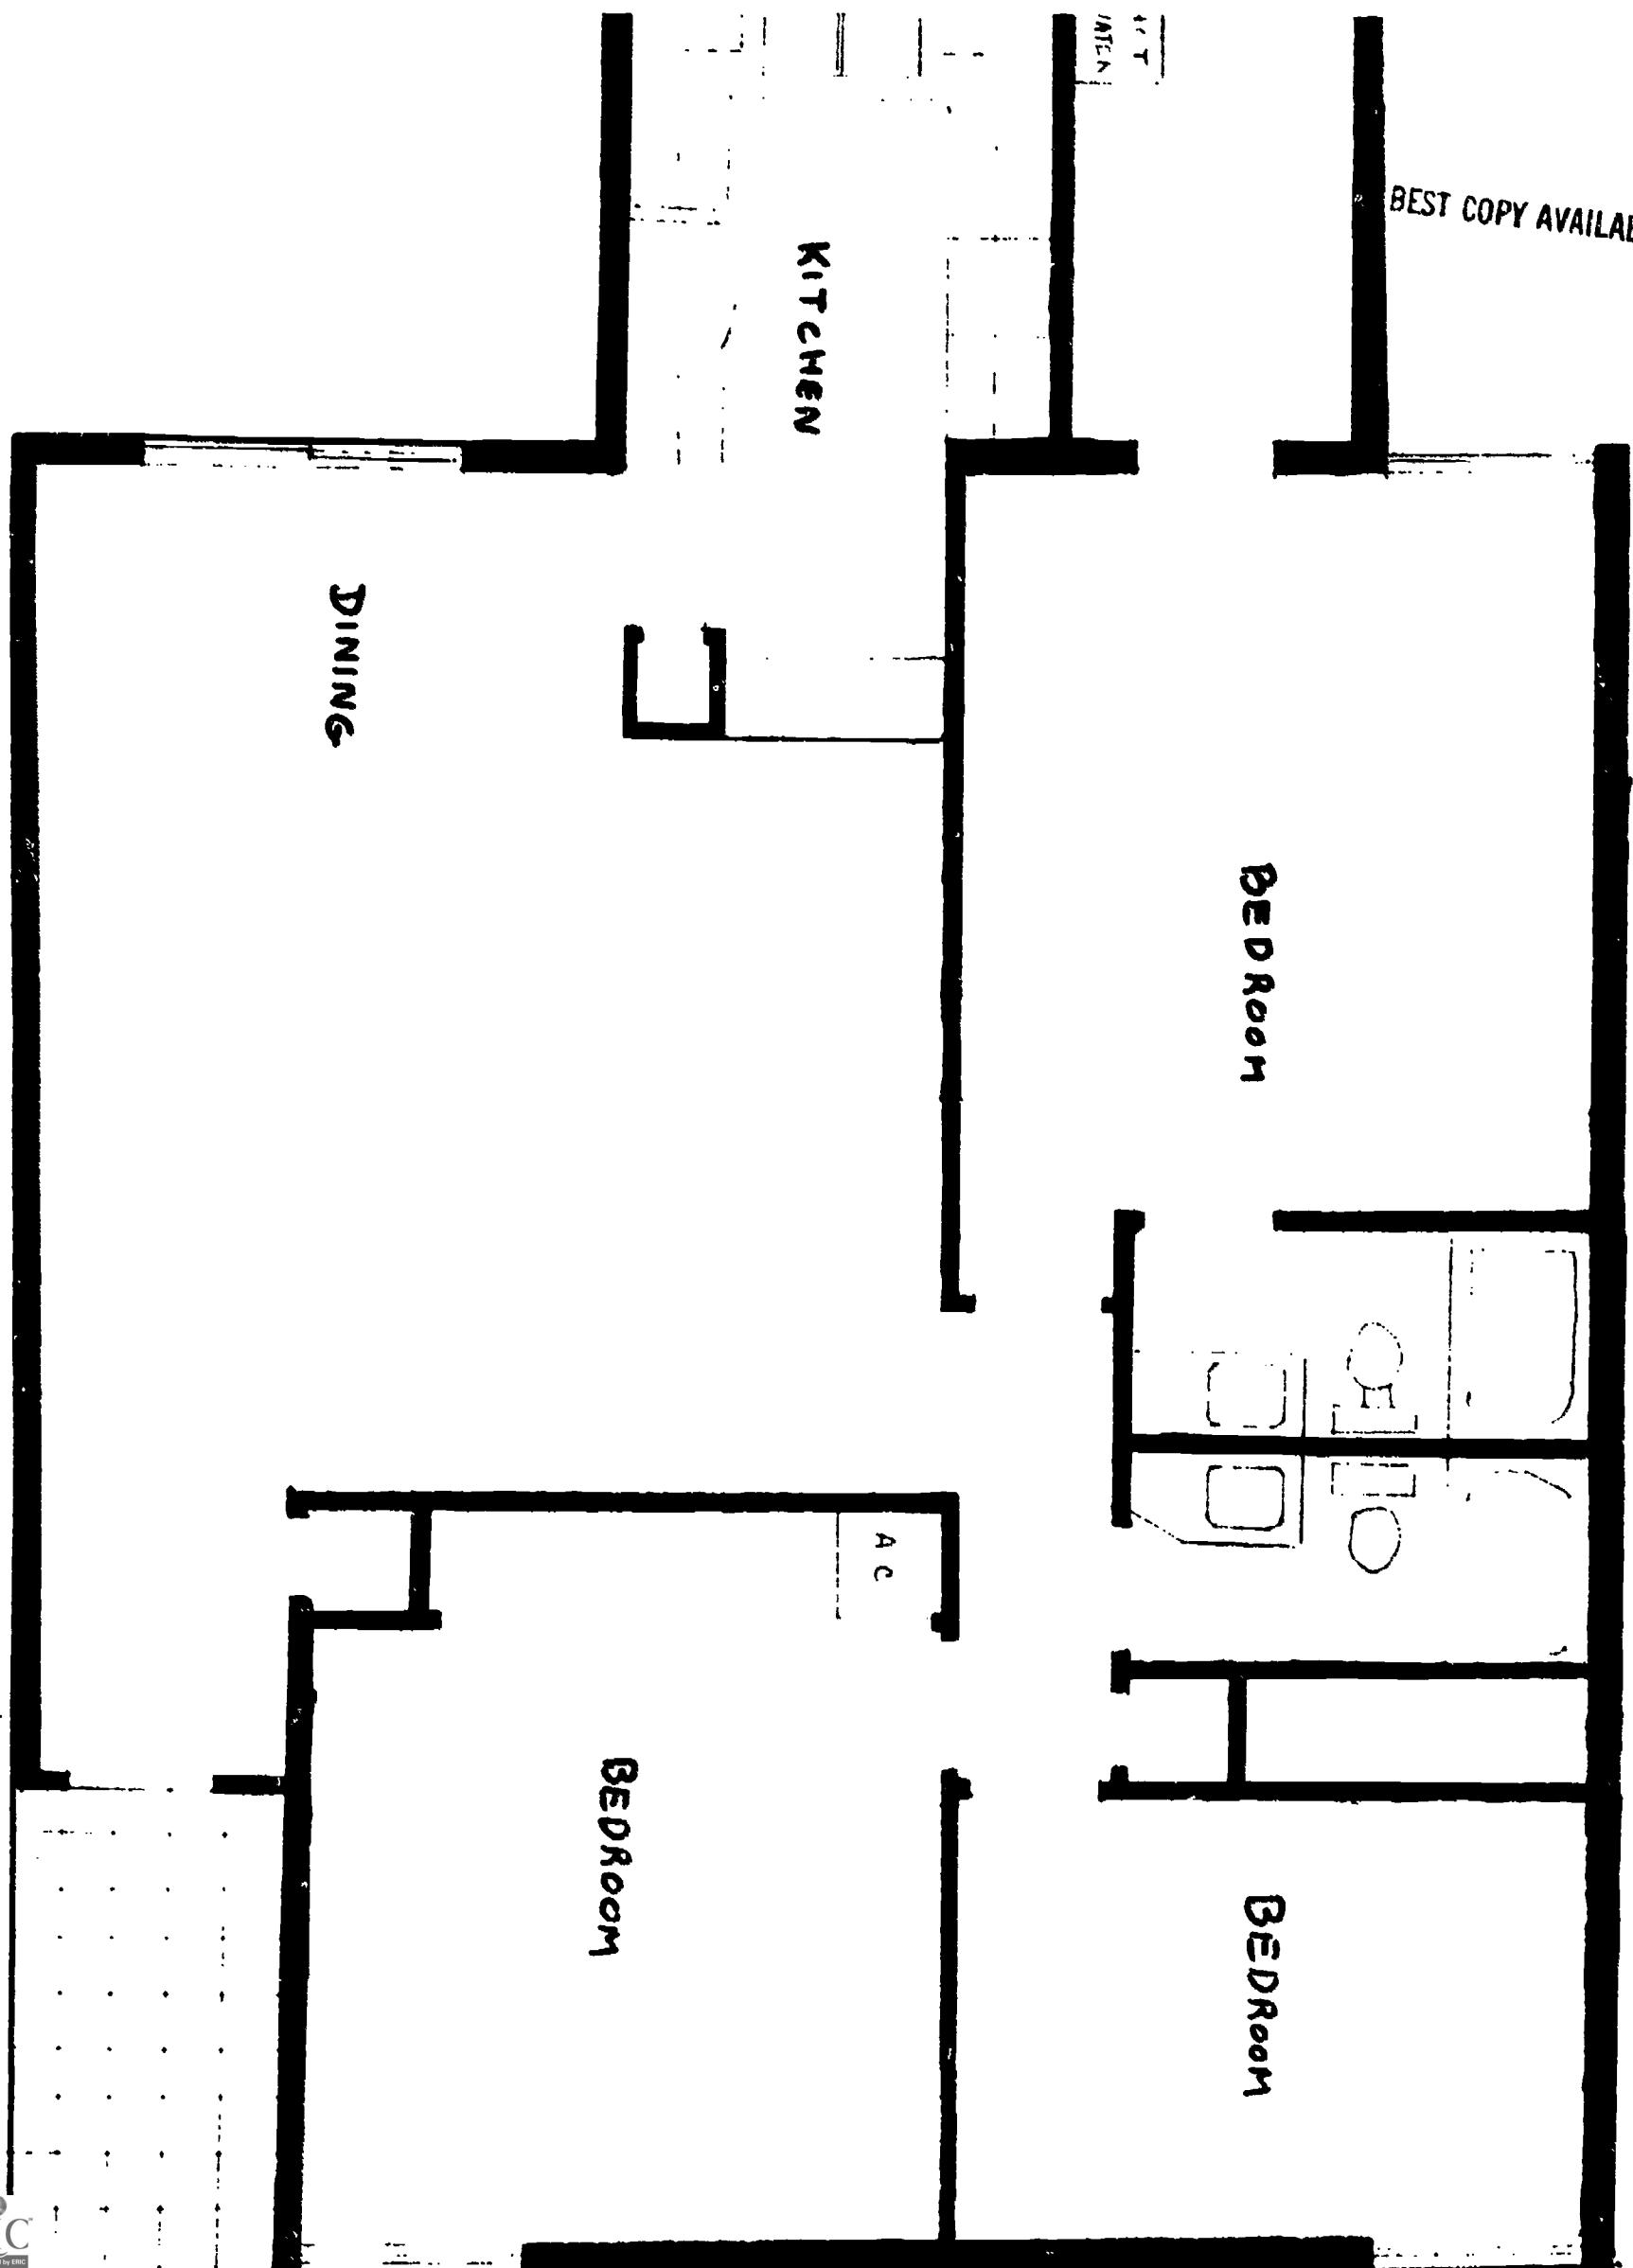

In furniture the husband prefers a mixture of styles. The wife is interested in antiques and tends to prefer period pieces. Darker woods and light colors are preferred. Blue is a favorite of both parents. The daughter is completely sold on the hot pink range. In fabrics the husband has expressed a dislike for velvets, intricate damasks and other textiles he labels "heavy and formal."

The husband works at home on occasion. Entertainment includes cocktail parties and buffet suppers. Sit down dinners are rare as a form of entertaining. As noted above all meals must be served at the dining room table. The only collection of note besides the vast number of books is one of mugs. Daughter plays the piano and is a record bug.

Father is definitely the head of the house. He is a very practical executive in a bank who will not tolerate frivolity or disorder about people or his home.

Your client, Miss Carolyn Davenport, is a career minded, single young woman. She has selected this apartment because of its proximity to her yacht club and office. Miss Davenport, along with two business associates, owns a forty foot ocean going sloop, moored two blocks away at the Coral Reef Yacht Club. Except for her import textile business everything revolves around her boating interests.

A fine collection of old nautical maps and several good oil paintings are the only furnishings Miss Davenport is bringing to her new apartment. It is the mood of the apartment that she is interested in. A warm, comfortable feeling must prevail, but the client cautioned against the Early American hominess approach to achieving this. The apartment's comfort and lived-in look must be on a much more sophisticated level. The client describes this as the "California Look."

Being a boatman, she is fond of woods, both sun bleached and natural. Preference was expressed for warmer colors. She is forced into compact living on the boat and hopes for a feeling of spaciousness in this apartment. Don't use too much furniture.

Evenings are frequently spent entertaining small groups of friends (4-6). Occasional large cocktail parties can be accommodated by the roof garden, which can be reserved for private entertaining. The apartment was selected for its view of Sailboat Bay. Keep this in mind while grouping the furniture.

A portion of the bedroom should be devoted to a home-office work area. Limited storage and a large writing area should be provided. A double bed has been requested. A small portable television needs to be included in the layout of the bedroom. It is used primarily to watch the news and one or two programs of special interest through the week.

This one bedroom apartment is located on the tenth floor of the only high rise in Coconut Grove. The view from the terrace is a constantly changing one of sailboats and Biscayne Bay. Floors, except for the bathroom and kitchen are a dark walnut parquet. Ceiling height is 8'-6". The window sill in the bedroom is 30" from the floor, the opening 4'-6" high. Door heights are 7'-0".
